The Hancock County Board of Supervisors Thursday morning approved three requests to the state Legislature asking for its assistance in hospital construction, enticing a residential facility for the elderly to locate here and allowing taxation for new services.

Previously, the supervisors requested a local and private bill to allow the county to issue revenue bonds to finance actual construction of a new county hospital, but the resolution did not address architect, engineer and attorney fees for the project.

The resolution approved Thursday by the supervisors requests legislation to allow the county to issue $400,000 in general obligation bonds to pay those fees 'in connection with construction of additions and improvements' to the hospital.

Regarding the residential facility for the elderly, the county leaders approved a resolution asking for legislation so the county may issue revenue bonds to finance that project as requested by Jack Stuart of Morton, president and director of Stuart Place, Inc.

Stuart said he plans to build four 'personal care homes' throughout the state and is requesting several counties to approve such resolutions so several sites may be considered for the

MAKE PLANS TO PLANT

The first few days of warm weather usually bring out the green thumb in all of us. However, to be a successful gardener, follow the motto 'Plan now and plant later."

Plan your garden based on how much you and your family can use and preserve. It's easy to plant more seeds in a few minutes that will take hours to harvest later.

Old gardening hands know how much to plant to fit their needs. New gardeners can get this information at the County Extension office. We also have information on which varieties will grow best in this

In making out your garden plan, consider the things you and your family like. Be careful when planting new kinds of vegetables you or your family may not like. You may want to start on a small scale until you are sure of family acceptance.

Another important part of planning a garden is having your garden soil tested. The results will help you determine fertilizer amounts and which crops are best suited for your soil. We have all the information you need on collecting a soil sample.

The recent warm weather urges many gardeners to jump ahead of mother nature and plant early. Remember that tender vegetables can't take cold soil or weather. Again, our office is the place to get information on when to plant each vegetable for best

With the right kind of planning, all that hard work you will be putting in later should pay off in a bumper crop of fresh vegetables just ripe for harvest.

With the upcoming planting season, farmers will handle and use many kinds of chemicals. Hancock County farmers have increased crop yields many times with the use of chemical fertilizers and pesticides have ended the need to share farm fields with insects

These chemicals must be used carefully and with the appropriate protective gear to avoid an accident.

It is our understanding that there will be selected tours of the Battleship Iowa on next Sunday, April 29 at Ingalls Shipyard.

We received a telephone call from Clarice Gustin, Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's executive director, reporting she had several passes.

Gustin reported the tickets she has are for the battleship's main deck, and are for the time period of 2-3 p.m.

If you are interested, we suggest you contact Gustin at the chamber's office on Monday at 467-9048, as she said she only had 16 passes.

The battleship is scheduled to be at Ingalls West Bank facility.

We shot some photos on Monday of Hancock County equipment dredging one of the canals bordering the county's harbor at Bayou Cadet.

The project was a joint effort by Supervisors Sam Perniciaro, Bert Courrege, Roger Dale Ladner and

A permit was received from the Corps of Engineers to do the deepening of the canal used by local commercial fishermen.

Some nine county trucks, one port and harbor truck. one dragline, and one backhoe were used in the operation including some 20 county employees.

This like the recent work at the County Dump at Catahoula shows the local officials work together to get things accomplished.

The canal used as a boat launch for sport fishermen was dredged last year.

Oh yes, the photos, they seemed to have just dissapeared, during processing, as we cannot find them.

We hope everyone has finished their income tax returns, state and local as today is April 15.

"The Governor's Service Line is staffed by counselors well-qualified to answer questions on a wide range of state agencies and services, said Checky Herrington, director of the Program Information Division, Governor's Office of Federal-State Programs. "If a counselor is not able to provide the answer to a question, the caller is referred to the appropriate agency, or the counselor obtains the answer and calls the person asking the question back

"The Service Line is a key element," Herrington said, "in Governor Allain's commitment of taking government to the people.'

Each year the Governor's Service Line responds to more than 20,000 calls.

Mitchell heads April Cancer Society drive

April is Cancer Control month and volunteers will begin calling on Hancock County residents during the annual residential drive on April 28 and 29, according to Melanie Mitchell, 1984 crusade chairman.

They'll be asking for a donation, but they will also be giving you something in return.

That "something" is a newly designed pamphlet aimed at cancer prevention. The pamphlet includes a "Quick Test on Cancer Risks for Lung, Colon and Rectum Cancer." The seven warning signals identified by the American Cancer Society are also outlined.

Most of the money collected from the residential drive is sent locally to help cancer patients with services and expenses. Money raised in the crusade also supports programs in prevention, early detection and treatment of cancer. In addition to crusade contributions, ACS also receives support from legacies and memorial gifts. Services available through ACS intyni arabanan menis Cleaning up rights of ways and keeping them well mowed can markedly help Mississippi be more beautiful especially this year as traffic headed for the New Orleans World's Fair passes through. Trash on roadways and vacant lots can leave an unfavorable impression on those visiting the state. Weeds and tall grass detract from the beauty of the countryside. Dirty or littered streets are not attractive. A number of towns and communities in the state, as part of the "War on Ugliness," are conducting clean-up operations this year. Oktibbeha County conducted an emphasis in this direction in April. Residents were asked to clean up property. Free trash bags were passed out and a bounty of 25 cents paid for each bag of trash collected at city hall. Scout troops, firement fraternities and hundreds of private volunteers worked, Similar programs went on in 25 cities around the state. Among them were Indianola, Inverness, Vicksburg, Newton, Tupelo, Columbus, Meridian, Carthage Corinth, Waveland and Bay St. Louis.

By KATRINA McDONALD After the division of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1844, bitterness between the two groups expanded in the years leading to Abraham Lincoln's election in 1860 and then through the carnage of the Civil War.

Although the Methodist Protestants, the United Brethren, and the Evangelical Association were not totally insulated from the slavery controversy, they were able to avoid the passionate struggle which fractured the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Civil War resulted in a structural reunion of the United States. The war's conclusion brought much more millions of slaves in the southern states.

It marked the beginning of a new era in American life. Industrialization, railroads, labor unions, cities, immigration, education, science, Jim Crow, the Robber Barons and much more would drastically alter the appearance and the disposition of the nation in the half century which followed.

The south's population, economy, and pride had been two-thirds its pre-war major gains in membership strength. Many of the churseverely damaged.

A number of its clergy had been killed or wounded in the conflict. Its educational, publishing and missionary programs had been disrupted.

Spirits had sunk to the point where some southern Methodists believed their only hope was reunion with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

From apparent despair and hopelessness, there stirred a new vitality among the southern Methodists. The Palmyra Manifesto (1865) and a pastoral address from the southern bishops rallied the church. Over the next 50 years its membership grew four-fold to more than two million.

not, a chemical should be used. Kalthane, dimethoate, malathion or diazinon may be used in a control program. Kelthane, is a very effec-

Α.

THE CASE FOR ADVERTISING.

It's a common reaction.

You're watching a good movie or a gripping program on TV, and, just as you're inching toward the edge of your seat, you hear those dreaded words:

"We'll be right back after this." You know what "this" is.

It's advertising.

Upset? A lot of folks are.

In fact, some people are so upset that they ask their legislatures to put a tax on advertising so there'll be less of it. Some people even advocate that advertising be banned all together.

Imagine

A world without advertising. No bulky ads in the newspaper. No awkward, unfolding spreads in magazines. No commercials interrupting your favorite TV program. Or getting in the way of your favorite radio music.

Paradise, right? Wrong.

Let us tell you what a world without advertising would really be like.

Heaven knows what this newspaper would cost you everyday.

Instead of small change, it could cost big dollars. You see, all the people who buy ads in your paper subsidize most of the cost of vour paper. If there weren't ads to help pay those costs, somebody else would have to pay.

That somebody else would be you. It's easy to say you'd be willing to pay more for a newspaper without advertising. A penny a day? Sure, why not?

But would you be willing to pay several more dollars a day?

Would you want your newspaper bill to be as high as your utility bills?

Of course you wouldn't. Beyond that, there's a lot of news to be found in all that advertising. You can find out who has things on sale, who offers the best food prices, who's running a sale on the shiny new car you're just dying to have. The list of ways you can save money by reading ads is almost endless. So advertising not only saves you money in the price of your daily paper, it constantly shows you ways to save much more money all the time. Still think there shouldn't be advertising in newspapers?

What are you? Rich or something?

The same holds true for your favorite magazines.

Even though the price of magazines keeps going up, the contributions of advertisers help keep those increases down

(Before you say it, yes, magazines used to cost a quarter. But stamps used to cost two cents, a phone call used to cost a nickel, and a blue plate special was only forty cents at the best joint in town. Like it or not, inflation is here to stay.)

A magazine costs considerably more per page to print than a newspaper. For one thing, the quality of paper used is superior and is far more expensive. And don't forget all those color pictures. They're not cheap

On top of that, most magazines have a circulation smaller than that of a metropolitan daily newspaper. That's because most magazines appeal to a small group of people interested in only one thing, while newspapers are printed for everybody who's interested in anything. Case in point: If you weren't interested in tennis, why the devil would you ever buy "Tennis World" magazine? Case closed.

Magazines allow advertisers to advertise their products and services only to the people who may be interested in buying them (or does everybody need the latest graphite tennis racket?), and, once again, those advertising dollars allow those people to afford their favorite magazine (no matter how limited their interest may be).

Advertising on radio should be music to your ears.

When was the last time you paid to hear your favorite local radio station?

The answer is "never." But guess who pays all those people who bring you all that entertainment? (After all. disk jockeys and newscasters don't work for free.)

You guessed it. Advertising.

So a few minutes of listening to the latest news about an advertiser's product or service is a mighty small price to pay for everything else you're getting for free.

And look at it this way. If you don't like the ad you're listening to, you can always change the station. Or turn the thing off. You're the one that's in control.

Why do you think there are now TV shows about TV commercials?

Because, believe it or not, a lot of people really like TV commercials.

Some TV commercials produced are wonderful little half-minutes of film. And, ves, it's true, some stink. But that's true in every field of human endeavor. Either way, they have one thing in common. Just like radio spots, TV commerdials pick up the tab for all the movies, programs, soaps, news, weather and sports you see on local and network TV. So the constant parade of local and network TV doesn't cost you a dime-only a few minutes of your time. We think that's quite a bargain, don't you?

Advertising is more than a bargain.

Sometimes advertising is quite useful. Have you ever been running low on gas on the highway, then breathed a sigh of relief when a sign told you a gas station was within easy reach? That's outdoor advertising.

Has anyone ever given you something useful with their company name printed on it? Maybe it's a hot pad, a ballpoint pen, or something equally useful. That's called specialty advertising.

And don't forget matchbooks you pick up in restaurants, hotels or almost anywhere else. If you don't think that's useful advertising, let's see you start a fire if you don't own a lighter. Chances are you have several matchbooks in your home. The point is this.

Advertising touches your life everyday with news about new products and services, with information about bargains to be found, with items you can use.

And it doesn't cost you a penny. Or does it?

Some people say advertising makes everything cost more. They're wrong. In most cases, the purpose of advertising is to sell something in large quantities.

When that happens, the cost of producing a product or providing a service goes down. Since American business is competitive, most companies lower their prices in order to beat the brains out of their competitors.

Increased sales means increased profits

after all. So, in most cases, the money spent on advertising is designed to lower the cost of the things you buy, not raise it.
This brings us to a point that needs to be addressed.

$ome people think utilities like the power company, the gas company and the phone company shouldn't be allowed to advertise. But if you carefully examine the advertising, you'll notice most utility advertising is actually teaching you to save money -offering valuable tips on how to use company services as economically as possible. So if you pay attention, you might just lower your utility bills.

And isn't that all you want in the first

Does advertising make people buy things they don't need?

Advertising doesn't force anyone to do

Yes, it encourages people to buy products or services that can be classified as luxuries. But wouldn't life without luxuries be boring? And the purchase of those "luxuries" means tens of millions of jobs in America alone, hundreds of millions of jobs around the world.

Granted, a "luxury" is a matter of definition.

Mankind got along quite well for thousands of years without the automobile. airplanes, telephones, the printed page, radio, television, electric light, air conditioning, and thousands of other things that we now take, if you will, for granted. So what's a luxury?

Unfortunately, advertising encourages some people to live a lifestyle they're incapable of affording.

But advertising didn't create fools. Nor does it cater to them.

Advertising is designed to help sensible people make sensible purchasing decisions in an expanding marketplace. Besides, if there were no advertising,

What about advertising that lies?

would there be no fools?

Those of us in the industry hate it as much as you do.

Probably even more. You see, advertising that lies is a black eye for the entire industry. But some people will always try and pull

When that happens, do what we do. Hit 'em where it hurts.

Turn the rascals into a consumer protection agency. Then, until the rascals change their errant ways, refuse to do business with them. Believe us, the offenders will get the message loud and clear.

What about advertising that's stupid or offensive? Call the advertiser, tell him you think the stuff is awful and that you refuse to buy from him until the bad ads go away.

Then stick to your guns. Enough calls, combined with a sharp plunge in sales, and the bad stuff will be gone before you know it.

Does advertising promote inferior products?

Of course it does.

But before you say, "Aha!", think of how many times you've been intrigued with a new product. You may have bought it because the ads were clever. Or you may have bought it because you thought you might like it.

So you tried the product.

And you hated it. Passionately.

You swore never to buy the product again.

If millions of people felt the same way you did, the product would die because nobody wanted to buy it again. So, in that sense, good advertising drives bad products out of existence.

But remember. Just because you hate a product, or have no use for it, that doesn't mean everybody else in the world feels the same way. It may be somebody else's very favorite.

What does advertising ask of you? Not very much.

A little bit of time, a little bit of understanding, and yes a little bit of forgiveness. Our industry isn't perfect. We know that as well as anybody.

But can you name an industry that is?
We hope this ad will help you see things our way. We hope it's helped to show you how many good things are brought to you in exchange for little more than a few minutes of your time. For the time you've taken to hear us plead our case, and for all the time you've given our industry over the years we only have one thing to say:

Cigar memorabilia

No one knows exactly why or when cigar bands and box labels were first introduced but two things are certain: they sparked a revolution in the cigar industry and provided collectors, then and now, with a collecting category that is a rich in color and design as it is in sheer quantity.

As near as we can tell, cigar bands and labels first came into use in the middle of the 19th century, in any case, by 1870 cigar band and label production was in high gear, where it remained until about 1930. Bands and labels from this period are especially sought, but younger examples may have value as well, depending on decoration or brand name. In general, however, the rule of thumb is the older the

Also keep in mind that cigar box labels are rarer than bands and that obscure brands are intrinsically more valuable than well-known brands. Thus a rare band, such as the Buster Brown cigar band designed by cartoonist Richard Outcault, may be considerably more valuable than a label from a well-known manufacturer such as White Owl. Most cigar bands and labels are not especially expensive. They generally sell for $1 to $25, with bands usually being less expensive than labels. Some true rarities, of course,

Besides labels and bands there are a host of other items relating to the cigar industry, all of which are collectable in their own right. State library budget cuts to affect local systems

Library System in 1983 submitted some 475 requests for information to the State Library Commission, but information services provided to state residents through local public libraries will be drastically reduced unless the Mississippi State Senate restores funds to the commission's book budget.

According to Anice Powell, president of the Mississippi Library Association, the agency's book budget was cut from its original $200,000 to $100,000. Already in effect is a five percent cut of $166,000 in the agency's operating budget, enacted earlier this year. magazines, large print books,

The Hancock County Neither the Budget Commis- films, Mississippi material sion nor the House of Representatives has recommended restoration of the funds, said Powell

> Last year Mississippi residents submitted 33,059 requests to the Mississippi Library Commission. Filling these requests at the state level saved the library systems about $20 per book and several hundred dollars per film, according to Powell.

Because many libraries cannot afford to purchase materials for loan to the public, the Library Commission has purchased such materials as reference books, and other material relating to the library science profession.

Powell said that materials in several categories will not be purchased. These include large print books, films and almost all circulating nonreference material.

In the past, she said, "the Library Commission has always listed itself as first among libraries used for interlibrary loan. However, as of July 1, the Commission will place itself last among libraries used for interlibrary

In a recent letter to public libraries, Powell stated "You (libraries) will be required to go to other public libraries before coming to the commis-

The impact of using other libraries in the state for interlibrary loan will mean a substantial increase in postage for mailing these books, she said.

"At present it costs about The 904th Field Artillery Division and was awarded fifty cents in postage to fill a request from the Library Commission, but that will double to about one dollar. It will also mean slower service since most public libraries are not equipped to handle interlibrary loans in volume."

Powell concluded by saying that "the Library Commission has always tried to do the very best it could with the resources available. However, even the best staff is crippled when they lack the materials with which to work. Without adequate book funds we will have to shift a substantial burden to libraries at the local level to provide the materials needed.3

The Mississippi Library Commission is the state agency charged by the Mississippi Legislature with library service to public libraries. The Mississippi Library Association is a professional organization composed of persons from public, private, academic and institutional libraries.

GARMON FUND

A special fund has been established at the University of Mississippi to help pay traveling expenses for fiveyear-old Precious Garmon of Clarksdale, the youngest person and the first Mississippi child to undergo cochlear implant surgery at the Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital in New York.
